

Theater and Media Performance

Career Pathways

School of Humanities and Social Sciences

Overview:

Theater and Media Performance emphasizes the similarities and differences among stage, internet, video, and film performance. Studies will include movement, voice for the actor, improvisation, scene analysis and script analysis within historical and cultural contexts and learn how these skills apply to theatre and media production. Skills such as self-awareness and the exploration of both verbal and nonverbal expression, as well as creative thinking will be acquired for stage and media performances. The auditioning process and being prepared to perform for the camera will also be addressed.

An Employer's Perspective:

From an employer perspective Theatre and Media Performance majors have the ability to speak S X E O L F O \, have great showman skills and memorization skills. They can creatively communicate verbally and non-verbally, as well as use collaborative problem-solving skills through all aspects of the production process. These types of skills can be applied to a number of careers and industries.

Salaries:

Salaries are dependent upon the industry, level of position, and geographical region. A few good resources for researching salaries of specific jobs within various industries are www.salary.com and www.payscale.com.

THE UNIVERSITY OF